Thousands of men are using forums to express their desires, police say Getty

The number of men in Britain interested in sexually abusing children could be in the tens of thousands, a police chief has warned.

Simon Bailey, National Police Chiefs' Council (NPCC) lead for child protection said that 4,000 men in the UK were found to be using a single online chat room by investigators monitoring a site this year.

The Norfolk Constabulary Chief Constable told The Guardian "I believe there are tens of thousands of men that are now going into chat rooms and forums with a view to grooming children.

Dominoes E-safety Q&A matching exercise

- Students have to race to put a set number of dominoes down
- Students to match the correct numbers on the dominoes to complete the Q&A match set
 - Students will record the numbers they have matched up on their exercise sheets.
 - Students will add a timer to see how fast they can place the dominoes down in the correct order.
- There are 14 matches that must be completed.
 - Students must race towards the finish line.
 - Students will need to stop the timer and record the number of dominoes knocked over and the time taken.
- They will then turn the sheet over to reveal the correct set matches.
- The first team to knock over the most number of correct dominoes sets over in the fastest time possible wins

Aidan Moss, a former teacher at Tudor Grange Academy Worcester, admits having child porn

Sebastian Richards

A TEACHER who admitted downloading indecent images of children had previously worked at Tudor Grange Academy Worcester – but there is no suggestion that his offending in any way involved the school.

Aidan Moss, of Coney Green Close in Great Meadow, Worcester, admitted making indecent images of children, last week.

This included nine category A pictures of children – the most explicit and offensive kind – along 22 category B and 15 category C images.

The 30-year-old formerly taught science at Tudor Grange Academy, a secondary school in Bilford Road, Worcester.
